CONCLUSION

If someone were to choose what the most important thing in photography they would say light exposure. It's a given idea, if you don't have good lighting in your photo then it isn't a quality photo. Light can give that dreamlike, golden look, and if you get the sun and focus the right way you can get the effect, which plenty of photographers enjoy. My primary resource was an email written to a family friend named Beth, who is a professional photographer, she has her own website and studio. (bb-photography.com). I chose the question of 'What are the main points to become a good photographer?' because I want to take on photography as a hobby of my own and with that, hopefully manage a successful YouTube account. I learned that some of the most important things to become a good photographer is know your camera, focus on the light exposure, practice, and learn more from other photographers. In conclusion, photography has a lot of main points, but it's the little things that count the most. Photography is researched plenty and a lot of people would like tot all on the photography career, as a main job or even a little hobby. A
